AGENCY FOR FOOTER'S DYE WORKS

GETTYSBURG MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Said this was his Home but Railroad Company Cannot Find his Relatives. Supposed to have been Trespassing.

Struck by a Philadelphia and Reading passenger train and fatally injured, Joseph E. Faulk in his dying moments gave Gettysburg as his address and stated that his home was just three miles from this place. The accident occurred on Friday near Slatington and the body is being held there by John F. Berkmyer, an undertaker, pending advices as to its disposition.

This morning John A. Cox, local agent for the Reading Railway, was advised of the accident and asked to communicate with relatives of the unfortunate man. Mr. Cox at once got in touch with Charles E. Foulke, of near Two Taverns, but he informed Mr. Cox that he had no relatives answering to the description of the man killed on the Reading.

This description said that the man was about thirty five years of age, that he had the initials "J. F." tattooed on his breast, and that a heart and the insignia of a secret order were tattooed on his arm. Foulke had been employed at Palmerton and is thought to have been walking on the railroad tracks when he was struck by the train.

He was taken to Slatington and everything possible was done for him but death relieved his sufferings in a short time. Just before he died he told the company representatives that his name was Joseph E. Faulke and he said that he resided about three miles from Gettysburg. No one seems to know any one who ever lived in this section who would answer the description of the dead man. The post office authorities do not recall ever having served mail here to any one by that name, and inquiry in the county fails to reveal anything further.

It is believed, however, that he may have resided here recently, working on a farm and, if this proves to be the case and any one can give any light on his family or any surviving relatives, they will confer a great favor by imparting such information immediately.

VIOLATED HEALTH LAW, PAYS COSTS

Fines would have Made a Total of Seventy Dollars but they are Withheld. State Board Brings Action here.

At a hearing held before Justice of the Peace John L. Hill this morning Haber A. Brenizer, a Hamiltonban township farmer, was charged with violation of quarantine regulations. He was sentenced to pay the costs and, at the request of John D. Keith Esq., local counsel for the State Department of Health, the imposition of fines was withheld. The minimum fines would have aggregated $70.00.

On June 12 Mr. Brenizer's ten year old daughter, Esther, was reported as having mumps, the date of the onset of the disease being given as June 2. On June 14 the quarantine was imposed which, under the act, would have been for a period of sixteen days from the date of onset and would have expired at midnight, Sunday, June 18.

On this latter date Mr. Brenizer drove to Fairfield, having left the quarantined premises without permission from the health authorities, the fine for such violation being not less than $50 or more than $100. And on the same day his daughter, Esther, was permitted to attend Sunday School at Fairfield for which Mr. Brenizer was subject to a fine of not less than $20 or more than $100.

On report being made by J. Harry Pecher, health officer for Hamiltonban township, the State Department of Health at Harrisburg began proceedings through their local counsel, Mr. Keith. Mr. Pecher made a plea for clemency before the justice.

This is the first action in recent years instituted in Adams County directly by the State Department of Health, and it is the intention of that department to prosecute vigorously all future offenders against the regulations in the townships, and in all boroughs where the State Department is in charge.

FIRE DAMAGES SHOP

Prompt Action of Bucket Brigade Prevents Big Blaze.

Fire destroyed part of the blacksmith shop of Bernard S. Jenkins, in Oxford township, Thursday evening, entailing a loss of $150. to the owners.

The fire which is supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion, spread rapidly. Harry Smith and sons, of the Conewago Chapel farm, hurried to the scene and formed a bucket brigade with the neighbors, pumping a well dry and finally gaining control of the blaze. The top of the shop was destroyed. The prompt action of the brigade saved the flames from spreading to the house, stable and hog-pen, which were close by the burning shop.

The property, which is tenanted by James Livelsberger, is covered by insurance with the Mumsburg Mutual. The loss to the tools was not estimated.

PROTESTS GAME

Will Try to Have Gettysburg's Victory Cancelled by League Head.

Manager Starr, of the Hanover team, has formally entered protest to President Jamison of the Blue Ridge League for the second of the Hanover-Gettysburg games played Thursday on Nixon Field. Manager Starr based his protest on "the inability of the directors of the Gettysburg Association to keep the crowd from the field while the game was in progress and interfering with the playing of the contest."

We wonder whether or not Billy Starr will mention what started the whole trouble here on Thursday. Speaking of sportsmanlike conduct—

HAS TO ABANDON POPULAR PARK

One of County's Prettiest Resorts is Closed to All Visitors. Buildings will be Razed and Trespassers Arrested.

Witmer's Park, near Littlestown, for the past seven years a mecca for outings of churches, schools, and picnic parties, has been officially closed to the public and trespassers will be arrested. This is the ultimatum of Manager S. T. Witmer who has conducted the resort during that time. Mr. Witmer stated that the rate of twenty cents a round trip charged by the Hanover and McSherrystown Railway Company was excessive and as no reductions were made for picnics the park gradually lost its popularity.

N. C. Hepperle, manager of the Hanover and McSherrystown Railway Company, stated that the same rate prevailed when his predecessor R. E. Manley was in charge. However, at that time the company made contributions toward improvements at the park.

When Mr. Hepperle assumed charge of the company and investigated the returns from patrons going to the park the results did not justify the outlay, and it was discontinued. As the same rate prevailed, Mr. Witmer conducted the park last year but made no effort to book picnics. This year without taking the matter up with the Railway Company he decided to discontinue entirely the park.

The natural beauties of the park together with the improvements made it quite a popular resort during the first six years of its existence. It is the only place close to Littlestown where boating and bathing could be enjoyed. Fishing, too, was popular with the youngsters as the stream was stocked with sun fish and bass by Mr. Witmer, and some fish were planted by the state fisheries.

The large oak and hickory trees in the grove are the finest specimens in this section. In the park is a grape vine said to be over a hundred years old. The root of this vine is over fourteen inches in circumference and is one of the largest in this section. The park grounds are covered with a fine crop of grass and many wild flowers make it most attractive.

The buildings consisting of a boat house, bath house, and general cooking house will be torn down.

APPROVE CONTRACT

Another Step toward Consolidation of Electric Light Concerns.

The Hanover Light, Heat, and Power Company has formally accepted the ordinances passed by the borough council of New Oxford and has approved the contract for street lighting there. The matter will now be presented to the Public Service Commission for approval at their meeting on Monday, June 26th at two o'clock. This matter has been pending since October 25, 1913.

It is the forerunner of the big consolidation of light companies in Adams County, which, it is planned, will include Gettysburg, adjacent townships, and all that territory between Gettysburg and Hanover. It is understood that this matter is now being pressed, and that an early completion of the consolidation plans will be forthcoming.

MILITARY CENSUS

Will Start in Cities but Include the Entire Country Later.

Making more evident the grim possibilities of the present trouble with Mexico, which has resulted in the mobilization of the National Guard throughout the nation, an immediate census, will be taken of all men eligible for drafting in the United States regular army service, should future conditions warrant such an action.

The move was regarded as the first in preparation for the possibilities of a long-drawn-out struggle, should the United States and Mexico actually declare war. All men between the ages of 18 and 45 years, the present limits for entering the army, will be included under the census.

While it is likely that Philadelphia and New York will be among the first so appraised as to citizenship, the same process will be carried on throughout the country, it was stated.

Representatives of the census bureau at Washington will co-operate with city officials in the compilation of the records. The information collected will be of such a nature as to give full details of the life and habits of each available citizen. An immediate start will be made. Similar measures were taken by the federal authorities at the outbreak of the Civil and Spanish-American wars.

FEAR TROOPERS LOST HEAVILY

Boyd's Command May Have Been Wiped Out.

SURROUNDED BY MEXICANS

General Pershing Sends Out Details to Recover the Wounded in Carrizal Battle.

San Antonio, Tex., June 24.—Fear that the casualties suffered by Captain Boyd's command of the Tenth Cavalry at Carrizal on June 21 had been very heavy was expressed by army officers here.

It was pointed out that if twelve men were killed, as reported through Mexican sources, it would mean that from thirty-five to forty had been wounded, according to the usual proportion. Meanwhile General Funston awaited further news from General Pershing, who despatched two squadrons of the Eleventh Cavalry to reinforce the survivors of the Tenth.

General Pershing has sent out large scouting patrols to locate wounded men of the colored detail which encountered the Carranza troops at Carrizal.

Several horse holders of the cavalry detachment are known to have returned to their base. Fear that the gravity of the American losses may have been greater than reported from Mexican sources was accentuated by the fact that reports of the retreat of Americans might have been chased by Mexican cavalry and further attacked.

The men reported killed or wounded with the number reported from Chihuahua to have been captured, would account for practically one troop, or fifty per cent of the command. In deed, from the reports available so far, it is by no means certain that Captain Boyd's command was not practically wiped out.

Combining various stories, army men believe that Captain Boyd, after being dismounted and deployed his men, had been forced to fall back to escape the crossfire of the Mexicans, who virtually had surrounded him under cover of a parley. It is believed that those captured may have been cut off from the main body by an overwhelming force and forced to surrender.

The fact that men detailed to hold the horses reached General Pershing's column also, is believed to account in a measure for the heavy casualties. The command was without wagons, stretchers or other means of transporting the wounded, and the loss of the horses may have been a serious factor in delaying a retreat, encumbered with wounded men. It was pointed out that progress must necessarily be slow as the wounded would have to be carried in improvised litters.

A despatch from Chihuahua City, Mexico, said that criticism of American military men who, he said, have caused all the trouble between Mexico and the United States, was made there by General Jacinto Trevino, military commander of the northeast.

Trevino said that General Hugh L. Scott was evidently "wrong when he told the Mexican conferees at the meeting in El Paso that the American military men, least of all factors in the United States, wished to fight against Mexico.

"The American military has disobeyed the orders of its own chiefs, has never respected the feelings or the property of Mexican citizens and has contemptuously ignored the dispositions of the Mexican government," said the general.

"I do not want war," added Trevino, "and I am doing my utmost to control the situation, but if war is forced on the Mexican nation by the Americans, I am ready to do my duty to uphold the honor and dignity of my country."

Officers arriving at Chihuahua with the body of General Felix Gomez, who was killed in the Carrizal engagement, said the American leaders evidently had instructed their men to concentrate their fire on the general who, on account of his great bulk, was an easy target. They said General Gomez was the first Mexican to fall, with three bullets in his chest.

From Colonel Zuazua, at Namiquipa, came the report, through Chihuahua, that the Namiquipa base has practically been abandoned and that the Americans have given the rancheros more than two hundred rifles that were taken from the Villa bandits.

Trevino is still treating with Contreras, Hernandez and other Villa leaders to come in and help expel the invaders, Chihuahua advices say.

All towns in Northern Mexico have asked for arms, offering to equip from 500 to 2000 in each town to help the government, said the despatch.

American guns commanded the situation at every important border point. Field artillery has been mounted on hillsides in the larger communities, the muzzles of their guns pointing in a southerly direction, while in the smaller towns, machine gun detachments have been stationed.

Military authorities here and in other border encampments announced that every precaution had been made for possible hostilities.

Andreas Garcia, Mexican consul in El Paso, reported that all was quiet at points where Mexican troops were near the American forces.

HOUSE VOTES TO ENLIST GUARDSMEN

$1,000,000 Set Aside to Care
For Their Dependents.

Washington, June 24.—In an amendment to the Hay resolution authorizing the president to draft into the federal service immediately all national guardsmen willing to take the oath the house almost unanimously declared an emergency existed making necessary a call on state troops.

A new section of the bill, offered by Representative Hay, and also unanimously adopted, would appropriate, not exceeding $1,000,000 for allowances not to exceed $50 a month, to dependents of national guardsmen with no other income than the guardsmen's pay.

An amendment by Representative Chipfield, of Illinois, providing that when the guardsmen are discharged after the emergency ceases, they shall resume their former national guard organization status, was adopted without objection.

One agreed upon by Representative Mann and Hay provided that the national guard drafted should serve for the period of the emergency, "not exceeding three years," unless sooner discharged.

The Hay resolution itself as amended, was adopted, 322 to 2. Representatives Huddleston, Democrat, of Alabama, and London, Socialist, of New York, cast the two negative votes.

ARMED MEXICANS RAID

Columbus, N. M., June 24.—Armed Mexicans have crossed the American border south of Hachita, N. M., raided a ranch and stolen the horses, according to a report received here.

The first report came to Colonel Sickles, commanding the Twelfth Cavalry border patrol. This report stated that mounted Mexicans, all well armed, had crossed the international boundary and raided the Parker ranch, six miles southwest of Hachita and had escaped.

An unofficial report says American troops immediately crossed into Mexico after them.

PERSHING REPORT BLAME MEXICANS

Silence of Survivors of Carrizal
Fight Causes Uneasiness.

AWAITING FURTHER DETAILS

Commander of U. S. Troops in Mexico Says Carranza Soldiers Opened Fire After Short Parley.

Washington, June 24.—Secretary of War Baker made public a report from Brigadier General John J. Pershing on the fight at Carrizal, Wednesday, based on his personal questioning of survivors from Troops C and K of the Tenth Cavalry, who were engaged in the conflict.

The report indicated that the attack upon the Americans was unprovoked, but gave no estimate of casualties on either side.

General Pershing had not heard from any officer with the two troops and Secretary Baker said a definite conclusion as to where the blame rested could not yet be formed.

The report, which was taken to the White House, and afterward laid before the cabinet, gave substantially the same account as was carried in border press despatches. It said the Mexican troops opened fire with a machine gun after a twenty-minute conference between Captain Charles T. Boyd, of Troop C, and General Felix Gomez, the Carranza commander at Carrizal.

Secretary Baker's statement followed:

"The war department has received from General Funston the following transmitted from General Pershing:

"Personally questioning troops with reference to the Ahumada affair two troops, Tenth Cavalry, Boyd's Troop C and Morey's K, joined on the night of the twentieth at Ojo Santo Domingo, marched to within one mile of Carrizal on the twenty-first, Captain Boyd in command, arriving there at 7.30 o'clock A. M. Boyd sent in a Mexican guide to ask permission to pass through the town. Mexican guide returned with refusal from General Gomez. Then Gomez sent out a note ordering saying that Boyd might pass through the town, provided he stopped for a conference.

"Then General Gomez himself came out and discussed the situation fifteen or twenty minutes with Boyd. Mean time, Mexican troops, moving out from the town began surrounding Boyd's column. Gomez retired, and when he reached the right of his troops, Mexican troops began firing machine guns. Boyd then dismounted to fight on foot.

"General Pershing also reports that he has sent out cavalry to support and bring back the two troops in question. As yet, however, has not had any opportunity to confer with any officer of either of the troops and what, if any misunderstanding led to the attack, is impossible to judge from the evidence at hand."

Officials are greatly worried over the delay in getting news from surviving officers of the little Tenth Cavalry detachment which engaged a superior force of Mexicans.

According to Mexican official accounts, there were about seventy-six Americans, seventeen of whom were made prisoners. Captain Charles T. Boyd, Lieutenant Henry R. Adair, and ten men are said to have been killed. The remaining forty-seven, only a few stragglers have reached headquarters. General Pershing said he hoped to have a report from surviving officers by courier during the day.

Secretary Baker denied rumors of plans for an immediate call for volunteers to add to the regular national guard force, and added that there has been no additional orders overnight for troop movements.

WILL RUSH TROOPS TO THE BORDER

The Militia to Go as Soon as Men Are Ready.

Washington, June 24.—Secretary of War Baker issued orders to all army departmental commanders to send to the Mexican border all militia available immediately upon their organization, without waiting for completion of the mobilization of the separate states.

The commanders were requested to notify Major General Funston, at San Antonio, Texas, when each regiment troops, battery or other unit completes muster. General Funston will indicate where he wishes the force sent in each instance, and the departmental commander, without further instructions from Washington, will arrange transportation and send them forward.

These orders, decided upon at a cabinet meeting, mean that instead of the militia being held in mobilization camps in the various states they will be rushed to the border immediately upon being mustered into the service of the federal government and will be whipped into shape in the field instead of in camp.

Officials interpreted the orders to mean that the general situation along the Mexican frontier is more critical than the administration has cared to admit. It is understood here that only such units as are below peace strength will be held in the mobilization camp in the various states.

The original orders to the guardsmen were for their mobilization in state concentration camps to await further orders. The war department had planned to call upon the state which effected the best and earliest complete mobilization, having regard to the distance and time for transportation.

TEAM WINS WITH HOAR ON MOUND

Ponies Go Right Along for Another Victory, Tapping Greenwell almost at Will. Heavy Hitting.

With Topsy Hoar's curves breaking just right and his much proclaimed head-work at its best, the Ponies gained a full game on last year's Champs by taking Morrison's charges into camp on Nixon Field Friday afternoon in nine fast innings by the neat little score of 3 to 2. At that, the Frederickians hit Topsy hard but he had almost faultless support and his outfielders were with him every minute of the game, copping some long ones that would have meant runs.

While all this was going on, when Gettysburg was in the field, still more was happening when the Ponies were at bat. Erney Greenwell, one of the most popular members of last year's local squad, was on the mound for Frederick and the way they hammered him was a shame. Thirteen safe blows were registered off his delivery, but "Greeney" was game and, though Gettysburg averaged almost two hits to the inning, but few of them resulted in runs. Many were made with two out and no less than nine Ponies were left on the paths.

Topsy Hoar was largely responsible for winning his own game. He started things in the third when, with one out, he hit a slashing double to center. Durboraw beat out one to the infield, Hoar going to third, and scoring when Johnson threw wild to second to catch Durboraw stealing. Durboraw came up at third on the play and tallied when Herman hit to Meyers who played the ball home, but the one-time Martinsburg star hooked into the plate a fraction of a second ahead of the ball. Stuff claimed he had the runner blocked but Hanks couldn't see it that way.

Frederick evened things in the fourth by scoring two clean earned runs. Morrison, first up, hit for two, and Tex Meyers sent one into deep center for three. Bobby Orrison scored him on a sacrifice fly.

In the local's half of the fourth Stein opened with a two base blow and took third on Boyne's bunt. Gas being safe at first, Plank's single scored Stein with what proved to be the winning run. Oyler struck out, but Hoar hit a long one to right. Boyne taking third on the out and Plank stealing second a minute later. Durboraw fouled to Johnson and one of Gettysburg's many chances to pile up a score was gone.

Things looked decidedly bad in the ninth. Hoar passed Tex Meyers, first up, and Orrison got a single. Then with no one out more heavy artillery came along but Myer bunted a fly which Hoar caught in circus fashion, and Johnson skied. Corgan, who hit .500 with Mt. St. Mary's this season, was called upon as a pinch hitter and he sent a long, hard fly to deep left which Dr. Steinhouser nabbed and the game was won.

Bunts

Those fans who do not have an ever amount of confidence in Topsy's endurance were wild in the ninth when the first two up got on base. "Here he goes" was heard from the pessimistic ones, but the collegian refused to take the airship and the next three batters were powerless before him.

Herman caught Meyers napping off second in the final frame, according to players and many fans, but Gene Hanks couldn't see it that way. It would have meant the last out. Artie Koehler had his mask off and was valking to the players' bench, so sure was he that the game was over.

Those Pony outfielders are one fine lot. Nothing that can be caught gets by.

Greenwell got pretty close to the scoring pan in the eighth when he hit for two and went to third on Agnew's out. He could not score, however.

Koehler and Plank are two dangerous batters, and the pitchers are getting hep to them, but little good it does for those singles keep on being hung up to their credit.

Those batting averages must surely be mounting now. In the four games this week the Ponies got a grand total of thirty six hits.

Ladies' day proved popular and the bleachers were well filled with enthusiasts. They all knew the game, too, and no foolish questions were asked.

Oyler took Seiffert's place at short. He struck out twice and had an error when he pegged low to catch Johnson at first but redeemed himself a moment later on the same sort of a play ending an inning. It happened in the seventh.

The Ponies are now two and a half games behind Frederick and seven and a half behind the league leaders.

In the last twenty five innings they have played not a run has been scored against Hagerstown. In that time the Terriers have amassed a grand total of two.

Gussie Boyne had a little time to keep from crabbing a hard time to succeeded right nobly. The fans are for that long legged first baseman and they will be for him first, last, and all the time if he gives up his one bad habit.

Greenwell always was a conscientious, hard working ball player. Gettysburg will be glad to see him win every time Frederick plays against some other team than the Ponies.

The attention of President Jamison has been called to conditions attending Thursday's double header. He will be fully informed of Gettysburg's side of the question.

On Monday and Tuesday the Ponies play at Hagerstown, on Wednesday and Thursday at Hanover, and on Friday and Saturday Chambersburg plays here.

NEW SYSTEM

Chastisement is Novel Effort of Western Maryland.

The Western Maryland Railway Company recently inaugurated what is known as the record suspension system among all the transportation employees of the road merely as an experiment, and if it meets the expectation of the management it is more than likely that it will become a permanent feature of the operating service on that system.

The new system does away with the actual suspension of an employee for weeks, breach of discipline, etc. and provides for marks being entered against the record of the offending parties. These records are kept daily and it enables the operating officials to tell the record of each man as long as he remains in the service of the company. Each offense charged to any transportation employee whether it has to do with train accidents which might have been avoided had the train rules been strictly adhered to, or other violations of the company's rules, is thoroughly investigated, but instead of suspending the employee for a certain period, if he is found to be in fault, so many marks, or demerits, are entered against his record.

It is believed that the new system will be more satisfactory, as it will enable a man to continue in service instead of being laid off and losing pay under suspension for an infraction of some rule. Of course, men who permit too many marks to be entered against their records are gradually weeded out of the service.

Selfish Eddie.

At Tommy's birthday party oranges were passed among the guests after supper was over. Noticing that one little fellow took the largest orange in the dish, Tommy said to his mother in an audible whisper: "O, look at Eddie! He likes himself better'n anybody else."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Peter Knight, defeated for political office in his town, decides to venture New York in order that the family fortunes might benefit by the expected rise of his charming daughter, Lorelei.

CHAPTER II—A well-known critic interviews Lorelei Knight, now stage beauty with Bergman's Revue, for a special article. Her coin-hunting mother outlines Lorelei's ambitions, but Blossom, the press agent, later adds his information.

CHAPTER III—Lorelei attends Millionaire Hammon's gorgeous entertainment. She meets Merkle, a wealthy dyspeptic, who seems fond of scandal.

CHAPTER IV—Bob Wharton breaks into the hall in a novel way and wins a thousand dollars from his father. Merkle asks Lorelei to be his detective in an affair which he fears. The intoxicated Bob Wharton insults Lorelei and then jumps in the fountain.

CHAPTER V—Jim Knight's doings disgust Lorelei and arouse her suspicion. Her dressing room partner looms as a central figure in the blackmail scheme against Hammon. Mrs. Croft, the dresser, tells what she heard.

CHAPTER VI—Lorelei meets Merkle to warn him of the proposed trap for Hammon. They go for a long auto ride in the night.

CHAPTER VII—The auto is wrecked; Merkle and Lorelei are forced to walk to the Chateau. Arriving, they meet Jim Knight and suspicious companions who leave suddenly. Hammon appears from within and tells of being tricked in company with Lias Lynn.

CHAPTER VIII—Lorelei goes shopping and meets Mlle. Demorest, notorious dancer, who takes her home to tea. Lorelei learns that the dancer is not what is said of her.

CHAPTER X.

Jim's appearance when he entered the dressing room that night was a surprise; he was clad in faultless evening attire.

"Why the barbaric splendor?" inquired Lorelei. "Do you want me to dress, too?"

"Sure thing. Look your best, and make me think I'm a regular John."

"Bergman dropped in to see me tonight," she told him, after they had gossiped for a moment. "I don't like the way he talked. He thinks he owes the girls who work for him."

Jim replied, carelessly: "Blow him and his job. You can get on at the Palace Garden."

"There's my contract; he can discharge me, you know, but I can't quit—that's one of the peculiarities of a theatrical contract. Well—he insisted on taking me to supper."

"A brother is a handy thing, once in a while, but for every-day use you need a 'steady' with a kick in each mitt," suggested Jim.

"I wish you would punch him."

"Who? Me? And go joy-riding with a square-toe? Nix. I'm too refined. Did you see tonight's papers?"

"There wasn't much in them."

Jim smiled wistfully. "There would have been if things hadn't gone right. I'm glad for your sake."

"Oh, the harm's done, I suppose. But there's one good thing about it—Bob Wharton hasn't bothered me this evening."

Jim, with an expressionless face, tried to speak to Lias Lynn, who had just come in. When his sister came down after the last act, he was waiting at the door and helped her into a cab, despite her protestations that she would much prefer to walk.

"What are you going to do with all the coin you save? Slip it to the shoe-makers?" he laughed. "I don't go out often; you'd better spring me good."

"As they seated themselves in the main room at Proctor's, he appraised her with admiring eyes. "You're the candy, sis. There's class to that layout."

"It's part of the game to look well in public, but I'd have enjoyed myself more if we had gone to Billy the Oysterman's and dressed the part."

She surveyed the gaudy dining room, with its towering marble columns, its tremendous crystal festoons, showering a brilliant but becoming light upon the throngs below, then nodded here and there to casual greetings.

Proctor's was a show place, built upon the site of a former resort the fame of which had been nation-wide; but the crowds that frequented it now were of a different type to those that had gathered in "the old Proctor's."

Prices were higher here than elsewhere; the costrooms were robbers' dens, infested by Italian mafiosi; tips were extravagant and amounted in effect to ransom. But New York dearly loves to be pillaged. Nothing speeds the Manhattan sleep hater more swiftly to a change of scene than the knowledge that he is getting his money's worth.

"Speaking of clothes," Jim continued, staring past his sister to another table, "there seems to be a strike breaker in the room. Pipe the gink with the nightshirt under his coat and the shoestring tie. There must be a masquerade—Say! He's bowing to you."

"Hush! It's Campbell Pope, the critic."

Mr. Pope had risen and was slouching toward them. He took Lorelei's hand, then shot a sharp glance at her escort as the girl introduced them. Accepting Jim's mumbled invitation, he seated himself and instructed a waiter to bring his coffee. Jim watched the nearest entrance with some anxiety, for the reviewer's presence did not fit well with his plans. As he finished ordering he heard Pope say:

"I was sorry the story got out, Miss Knight; but it was pretty well smothered in this evening's papers. Of course you were dragged in by the hair to afford a Roman spectacle; we all saw what it meant when it came to us."

"What did it mean?" queried Jim, with brotherly interest.

"Blackmail. The word was written all over it. Melcher's connection with the affair was proof of that; then—the way it was handled! Nobody touched it except the Dispatch, and, of course, it got its price."

"I thought newspapers paid for copy," innocently commented Jim.

"Yes, real newspapers; but the gang had to publish the stuff somewhere. It is reported that Hammon paid fifty thousand dollars to prevent Melcher from filing suit. I dare say things will be quiet around Tony the Barber's now."

"You press people certainly have got a lot up your sleeves," James' involuntary start of dismay did not pass unnoticed. He did not relish the gleam in Pope's eyes, and he hastily sought refuge in a goblet of water, notwithstanding his distaste for the liquid.

"We sometimes know as much as the police, and we invariably tell more," continued Pope. "Yes, a business man can get a haircut in Tony's without fear of family complications now; I suppose Armistead is smoking hop; Young Sullivan is probably laying an alcoholic foundation for a wife-beating, and—the others are spending Hammon's money in the cafes."

Jimmy Knight paled, for behind Pope's genial smile were both mockery and contempt; a panic swept him lest this fellow should acquaint Lorelei with the truth. Jim lost interest in his claims and thereafter avoided conversation with the wariness of a fox.

He was still glowing with resentment when Robert Wharton paused at the table and greeted its occupants cheerily. In response to Jim's invitation Bob drew up a fourth chair, seated himself, and began to beam upon Lorelei. Noting the faint line of annoyance between her brows, he laughed.

"Retreat is cut off," he announced, complacently. "Escape is hopeless. I've left orders to have the windows barred and the doors walled up."

"Eh? What's the idea?" inquired Pope.

Wharton answered sadly: "My vanity has suffered the rudest jolt of its young career; I mourn the death of a perfectly normal and healthy self-conceit, age twenty-nine. Services at noon; friends and relatives only."

"Oh! You've heard the seductive song of the Rhine maiden?" Pope's eyes were twinkling.

"Eh?—I'm tangled up like a basket of tickler tape. You see, Campbell, I drink; candor compels me to acknowledge that much. In a moment of folly I was indiscreet, and ever since I have been trying to apologize. In short, I'm in Dutch, and there sits the adorable cause of my sorrows."

In spite of Wharton's reproachful tone, the gaze he bent upon Lorelei was good-humored, and she saw that he was in a mood different to any she had ever seen him in. Strange to say, he was sober, or nearly so, and he was plainly determined to make her like him.

"Has he annoyed you, Miss Knight?" asked Pope.

"Dreadfully."

Wharton explained further. "The first time we met I deserved to be slapped, and I was. You see, I was ruder than usual. But I have sobered up purposely to apologize; I have repented, and—well, here we are, thanks to brother James."

"Thanks to—Jim?" Lorelei raised her brows.

Pope turned to young Knight and said, politely, "That is my foot you are standing on."

Ignoring Jim's mute appeal, Wharton ran on, smilingly: "He promised to shackle you to a table until I could stammer out my halting apologies, and now that I've done so in the presence of press and public won't you forgive me and help me to bury the hatchet in a Welsh rabbit?" He was speaking directly to her with a genuine appeal in his handsome eyes. Now that she saw him in his right mind, it was unexpectedly hard to resist him, for he was very boyish and friendly—quite unlike the person who had so grievously offended her.

When she and Jim had first entered the restaurant they had received a polite but casual recognition from the head waiter, but there attentions had ceased. With Wharton as a member of the party, however, there came a change. Mr. Proctor himself paused momentarily at the table and rested a hand upon Wharton's shoulder while he voiced a few platitudes. Then in some inexplicable manner Robert found himself not only ordering for himself but supplementing Jim's menu with rare and expensive viands. As a great favor, he was advised of a newly imported vintage wine which the proprietor had secured for his own use.

Of course Mr. Wharton wished to sample such a vintage, any vintage, in fact, since a thousand fires were consuming him, and his nerves were on edge from the night before. The first draft electrified him, his spirits rose, and he swept his companions along with his enthusiasm. From surrounding tables people accosted him; men paused in passing to exchange a word about stocks, polo, scandal, Newport, tennis, Tuxedo; none were in the least stiff or formal, and all expressed in one way or another their admiration for Lorelei. Women who she knew were not of her world beamed and smiled at the young millionaire. It was a new experience for the girl, who felt herself, as the supper progressed, becoming conspicuous without the usual disagreeable accompaniments. Men no longer openly ogled her; women did not nudge each other and whisper; her presence in company with a member of the idolized rich was causing gossip, but gossip of a flattering kind.

All this attention, however, had quite the contrary effect upon Campbell Pope. Much to Jim's relief, he excused himself shortly, whereupon the former, after allowing Wharton to pay the score, suggested a dance, breezily sweeping aside his sister's mild objection. Of course Bob was delighted, and soon the trio had set out upon a round of the dancing cafes.

Bob Wharton had drunk heavily, but up to this time he had shown little effect from his potations beyond a growing exhilaration; now, however, the wine was taking toll, and Lorelei felt a certain pity for him. With Robert Wharton liquor intensified a natural agreeableness until it cloyed. His amenities were monstrously magnified; he became convivial to the point of offensiveness. In the course of this metamorphosis he was many things, and through such a cycle he worked to-night while the girl looked on.

Overcoming his ungarded instincts, Jimmy Knight, as the evening progressed, assumed the burden of entertainment. He too, adopted a spendthrift gaiety and encouraged Wharton's libations, although he drank little himself.

There came a time when Bob could no longer dance—when, in fact, he could barely walk—and then it was that Jim proposed leaving. Bob readily agreed—having reached a condition of meekness where he agreed enthusiastically to anything—and Lorelei was only too glad to depart. She had witnessed the pitiful breaking down of Bob's faculties with a curious blending of concern and dismay, but her protests had gone unheeded. Having had a glimpse of his real self earlier in the evening, and being wise in the ways of temperance, she felt only pity for him now as the three made their way downstairs.

While Jim went in search of their belongings, Bob propped himself against the wall and regarded her admiringly through eyes that were filmed and unfocusable.

"Fairy princess, you are more adorable every minute," he said, thickly. "Yes! A thousand yeses. And I'm your little friend, eh? No more slaps, no more mysterious exits, what?"

"That depends upon you."

"I'm behaving finely," he vaunted. "I usually act much worse than I have tonight, but I like you. I like you differently—understand? Not like the other girls. You're so beautiful! Makes me dizzy. You forgive my little joke eh?"

"What joke?"

"Meeting you the way I did tonight. Jim's nice boy—obliged to him."

"I see. Then it was all planned?"

He nodded vehemently and nearly lost his balance.

"How much—did you pay him?" Lorelei queried, with difficulty.

Mr. Wharton waved his hand in a magnificent gesture. "What's money, anyhow? Somebody's bound to get it."

"Fifty dollars?"

He looked at her reproachfully. "That's an insult to Jim—he's a business man, he is. More than that—Oh yes, and I'll take care of him again—this very night. I'll stake him. He knows a place."

"Will you do me a favor?" she asked, after a pause.

Wharton assured her with abnormal emphasis that her lightest wish was law.

"Then go straight home from here," she pleaded.

"I say, that's not fair." Bob looked ludicrously shocked. "I promised Jim—Wouldn't have me break a sacred promise, would you? We're expected—A little game all arranged where we can bust it quick. If you hear a loud noise—that'll be Melcher going broke."

"Melcher?" Lorelei looked sharply at her brother, who was approaching with her wraps, and noted that he was perfectly sober. A moment later she checked Bob in the act of giving directions to the cab driver:

"Wait. Where do you live, Mr. Wharton?"

"The Charlevoix." It was the most expensive bachelor apartment building in the city.

"Drive to the Charlevoix," she told the chauffeur.

"Hold on, sis," cried Jim. "We're going to take you home first."

"No."

"But—" Jim saw in his sister's face something that brought a smothered oath to his lips. Drawing her out of hearing, he muttered, angrily, "Mind your own business; I've got something on."

"Are You Stuck on the Boob?"

"I know you have." She met his eyes unflinchingly. "But you shan't rob him."

Jim thrust his thin face close to hers, and she saw that it was distorted with rage. "If you don't want to go home, stay here. He's going with me."

"We'll see."

She turned, but he seized her roughly. "What are you going to do?" he demanded.

"I'm going to tell him he's being taken to a crooked gambling house."

and that you're working for Max Melcher. He isn't too drunk to understand that."

Her brother clenched his fist menacingly, but she did not recoil, and he thought better of his impulse.

"Are you grand-standing?" he queried, brutally. "Are you stuck on the boob? or do you want your bit?"

Without reply she walked back to the cab, redirected the driver to the Charlevoix, then seated herself beside Wharton, who was already sinking into a stupor. Jim slunk in behind her, and they were whirled southward.

It was a silent ride, for the besotted young millionaire slept, and Jim dared not trust himself to speak. Lorelei closed her eyes, nauseated, disillusioned, miserable, seeing more clearly than ever the depths into which she had unwittingly sunk, and the infamy to which Jim had descended.

At his hotel Wharton roused himself, and Lorelei sent him reeling into the vestibule. Then she and Jim turned homeward through the deserted streets.

Mexican Names.

Mexican names that are euphonious in Spanish are awkward when pronounced as in English. The vowels have the same sound as in German. J has the sound of a strongly aspirated H, and the H is mute. The double R is rolled, and the double L is followed by the consonant sound of Y. The accent is on the ultimate when the word ends in a consonant, usually on the penultimate when ending in a vowel. Exceptions are indicated by use of the accent mark.

Women Spoil Watches.

It is a notorious fact that watches owned by women are less accurate than those carried by men. The cause for this can be directly assigned to the irregularity with which women wind their watches and the frequency with which they allow them to run down.

GERMANS ARE HOLDING RUSS

Three Armies on Offensive Along Sixty-Mile Front.

MACKENSEN IS SUMMONED

Muscovites Are Advancing Rapidly in Bukovina, in Pursuit of the Broken Austrian Army.

London, June 23.—Three German armies, made up largely of troops from the western front, are on the offensive on a sixty-mile line in the region of Kovel, Vladimir Volinski and Sokul, in an effort to stem the Russian advance and save the Austro-Hungarian army. It is reported that Field Marshal von Mackensen has been ordered to take charge of the Austro-German operations in Volhynia and Galicia.

Although the right flank of General Brusiloff's Russian armies is meeting with serious resistance, the left wing, in Bukovina, is moving forward rapidly, having advanced more than thirty-five miles since the capture of Czernowitz on the seventeenth.

The Petrograd war office announced the capture of three villages west of Radautz, thirty miles south of Czernowitz, the occupation of which was reported Thursday. Eight hundred prisoners were taken.

At the northern end of the line along the Dvina, artillery duels continue.

The official announcement by the Russian war office of the capture of Radautz, a town of 18,000 inhabitants situated thirty miles south of Czernowitz and ten miles from the Rumanian frontier, shows how actively General Letichitzky is pursuing the broken Austrian forces.

According to Petrograd despatches nothing but a miracle can avert the destruction of General Pfanner's army as General Letichitzky now holds a stretch of twenty miles on the Sereth river.

According to a report from Rome, an Austrian army under General Balthasar is shut up in the angle of the frontier near the town of Sereth, completely surrounded by Russians.

A Berlin war office report says that in spite of repeated counter attacks the attacks of General von Linsinget west and southwest of Lutsk continue to progress. On the front forward of the Berestchok-Brody line (southwest of Dubno along the Galician frontier) Russian attacks were repulsed.

In von Hindenburg's zone of action as a result of the German advance near the Beresina, east of Bogdanow, forty-five prisoners, two machine guns and two revolver cannon were captured.

ATTACKING IN CHAMPAGNE

German Rushes Along 1200-Yard Line Thrown Back, Says Paris.

London, June 24.—Despite the absorption of such large numbers of their troops in the Verdun operations and the reported despatch of considerable forces to cope with the Russians on the eastern front, the Germans are displaying activity along other parts of the line in the west.

Thursday they opened up heavily with their artillery on the French in the Champagne region and at night attacked three times on a 1200-yard front near Maisons-de-Champagne. They failed, however, according to the bulletin of the French war office, to obtain a permanent footing in any of the French positions.

Before Verdun, only minor infantry operations were reported, but the heavy bombardment east of the Meuse, where the direct assault on the fortress is being pressed, is being continued. Paris described the artillery fire here as of "unprecedented violence," and reports the bombardment as having been kept up in considerable volume during the night, shells producing eye irritant gases being freely employed.

VIRGINIA BANK ROBBED

Two Bandits Get $4000 at Crockett and Escaped in Motor Car.

Wytheville, Va., June 24.—The bank of Crockett, at Crockett, seven miles west of Wytheville, on the Norfolk and Western railway, was robbed by two strangers, who, on entering, covered the cashier, Arthur Houshelt, and a patron of the bank, Roy Groseclose, with guns.

The robbers forced the cashier and Groseclose to go into the vaults and remain until the robbery was completed.

Four thousand dollars was obtained. The bandits then got away in an automobile stolen from a neighboring farm after tying him to a tree.

Rumor Falkenhayn Out

London, June 24.—A report that General von Falkenhayn and Field Marshal Conrad von Hotzendorf have been removed from their posts as chiefs of the German and Austrian general staffs was received here in a Rome wireless despatch. It added that General Schaeck, a German commander at Verdun, has been dismissed.

Four Killed, Seven Hurt in Wreck. New Castle, Pa., June 24.—Four persons were killed and seven seriously injured in a collision between a passenger car and a freight car on the Harmony Interurban line near North Sewickly. Two of the injured may die.

FIVE OF ALLENTOWN FAMILY GO TO WAR

Father, Two Sons and Two Sons-in-Law in Company.

Allentown, Pa., June 14.—Five sets of Allentown brothers, and a case where five members of one family enlisted, are among the glorious things which attest to Allentown's patriotism in this city's response to President Wilson's call for troops.

When the troops left this morning Captain Orlando C. Miller, aged forty-five, commander of Company B, Fourth Infantry, took along two of his sons, Barry, aged twenty-five, and Charles, aged twenty-four, both married, and two brothers-in-law, Howard and Garfield Lester. The Lester boys are sons of the late Tilghman Lester, who until his death several years ago, was for decades about the best-known civil war veteran in Allentown. A third Lester brother, Charles, will stay at home to support their mother. The three Lester boys drew lots to determine which one would have to remain for this duty.

Wilbur Bruder, a pressman on the Allentown Leader, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bruder, went with Company B in hopes of somewhere in Mexico meeting his brother, Frank Bruder who is a member of the Eleventh Cavalry and is in the thick of the danger with General Pershing.

ULSTER OUT OF HOME RULE

Belfast Conference Accepts Proposal by Vote of 475 to 265.

Belfast, June 24.—The conference of Ulster Nationalists held here, to consider David Lloyd-George's proposal for the settlement of the Irish question, resulted in its acceptance by a vote of 475 to 265.

John Redmond presided and was supported by Joseph Devlin. Delegates from all the Ulster counties and the bishops of these counties were present. In all, 1000 delegates were in attendance.

The speech of John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, had the effect of securing the support of many who hitherto were opposed to the exclusion of some of the Ulster counties from home rule.

It is unofficially stated that Mr. Redmond declared that if the exclusion of six Ulster counties was not accepted by the conference he would resign the leadership of the Irish party.

When he chases them they quickly return, and yet he must grin and bear it.

"Reason-Why" Tires

GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires are light in weight, and close grained.

This proves them relatively free from the usual inert substances or "fillers," that give excess weight, stiffness, and grind, to Tire treads.

More than 200 different Makes and Brands of Motor-Car, and Truck, Tires were manufactured and sold in U. S. A. last year, 1915.

These totaled about 12,000,000 Tires. Of that 12,000,000 total Tires, the B. F. Goodrich Co. made and sold one-fourth.

Yet, Tires are only one of the 267 different lines of Rubber Goods made by the Goodrich Rubber Factory, which is the largest in the World, with a 47-year Experience.

This indicates the "Reason-Why" Goodrich Best-in-the-Market Fabric Tires can be, and are, sold to Consumers (via Dealers) at the lowest prices in America, per delivered Mile of Performance.

Optimistically speaking, the weather might be worse. We will have worse days and nights soon, when instead of too much rain and cloudiness we will have perspiration. Are you ready in the matter of clothing to keep cool? If not see us.

Several Hundred Cool Cotton Frocks and Gowns. Most of them very new. All made this season.

More to be here this week.

You will be surprised at the littleness of the cost. Many of them are of the simple useful kind that women just can't do without, others nice enough to wear on any occasion. They are mostly of White and Figured Voiles, made to fit and in styles to suit each particular wearer, with less to pay than you would expect when you see them.

INDUSTRIES GLAD TO AID IN WAR

Thousands of Firms Register With Naval Consulting Board.

30,000 ENGINEERS AT WORK

Committee on Industrial Preparedness. Taking Inventory of Country's Business, at Same Time Shows Factory or Mill How It Can Be Useful in Times of Need to Army and Navy.

The returns from the vast industrial inventory now being made in every nook and corner of the Union by the committee on industrial preparedness of the United States Naval Consulting board mark a new and vital relation between the business men of America and the federal government. Over 100,000 firms are being registered. The information gathered is the first fruit of the work of the army of 30,000 American engineers, members of five eminent scientific bodies, who form the field force of the committee organized to find out for the government the real industrial resources of the nation in time of war.

For this sweeping canvass, which is headed by Howard E. Coffin, chairman, and W. S. Gifford, supervising director, the whole country has been elaborately systematized, with directing boards of the leading engineers in every state, the District of Columbia and Alaska. This marvelous smooth working organization of unpaid experts has already accomplished definite results, and the great inventory, as shown by the reports of state chairmen now being received, is moving swiftly and satisfactorily to its end.

Willing Co-operation.

The manufacturers of the nation, recognizing the highly qualified and nonpartisan personnel of this movement, which has the strong support of the president, the military heads and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, have almost without exception responded with the most intelligent patriotism and the deepest interest in this close knit movement for a thoroughgoing industrial preparedness. They were called upon to give very comprehensive information on the adaptability of their factories, mills and mines to federal uses from the hour of military mobilization, the date to be held in the strictest confidence for the sole scrutiny and benefit of the war and navy departments of the United States.

A few manufacturers have doubted the ability of their plants to aid the government in wartime. They have almost invariably changed their views when shown how little doubt there is that on the outbreak of war practical in all concerns not engaged in lines of work essential to the national needs would be stripped of their labor, either for the army or for manning other industrial plants vital for the supply of such needs, and that in the event of hostilities probably 80 per cent of the industries of America would of necessity be concentrated on producing the myriad elements of twentieth century warfare.

In the state of New York alone some 35,000 firms are being inventoried. In no case so far has the New York board met with definite refusal to give the desired information. The filled in forms are already arriving at Chairman J. G. White's office at the rate of several hundred a day, although this board asked many of the larger firms to sacrifice speed to accuracy.

The response shows almost unanimous desire on the part of these business men, many of them of international reputation, to support the work of the committee, and a summary of their letters discloses in the most interesting and graphic way how the industries of the Empire State could aid just themselves to the needs of conflict if—and, as Supervising Director Gifford says, "it is a very imperative if"—efficiently mobilized in time of peace.

A large capacity sash chain maker, for example, believed he could with little difficulty produce cartridge clips for rifles and machine guns, and a manufacturer of thrashing machinery was sure he could make 600 six-inch shells per day.

How Manufacturers Respond.

A maker of underwear declared he could turn out bandages and other knit goods for the army and navy and Red Cross services, a button maker thought his machines could be used for small munitions work, and a company manufacturing drugs stated that it could turn a considerable portion of its product into an adjunct for making cordite for shells.

One well known foundry not many miles from Bowling Green said it was well equipped to turn out tools and machinery for small arms and ammunition, a maker of belting even suggested that he could produce webbing with which to fasten equipment on soldiers, and a famous producer of condensed milk thought he could be of use to his government in time of war.

A leading Buffalo manufacturer wrote, "We look upon it as a patriotic duty to fill out the blank forwarded to us," the president of a great railroad wrote at length analyzing the situation in a most sympathetic way, and a maker of pocketknives volunteered to produce various lines of munition supplies.

The "S O S" Call.

The original wireless signal of distress at sea, "C Q D," was adapted from the old "all stations" or general call of line telegraphy. But at the first International wireless congress it was suggested and approved that a better call was "S O S," which, by its arrangement of dots and dashes, is different from any other call.

"S O S" has no special meaning. It is not intended to express "Save our souls" or anything else equally dramatic. This call is an international one and has the same meaning in all languages.

Aeroplane "Loops."

The first person ever to "loop" the loop in an aeroplane was M. A. Pezard, in May, 1913. The first woman to "loop the loop" was Miss Davies, but she was a passenger. The first woman to "loop the loop" alone was Miss Katherine Simpson. Probably the record for "looping the loop"—although unofficial—is that listed as performed by a Russian who is said to have made forty-six loops continuously. — New York Times.

MARK TWAIN'S HOME.

Its Charm and Hospitality and the Motto It Lived Up To.

Many frequenters have tried to express the charm of Mark Twain's household. Few have succeeded, for it lay not in the house itself nor in its furnishings, beautiful as these things were, but in the personality of its occupants, the daily round of their lives, the atmosphere which they unconsciously created. From its wide entrance hall and the jewel-like conservatory below to the billiard room at the top of the house it seemed perfectly appointed, serenely ordered and full of welcome.

The home of one of the most unusual and unaccountable personalities in the world was filled with gentleness and peace. It was Mrs. Clemens who was chiefly responsible. She was no longer the half timid, inexperienced girl he had married. Association study and travel had brought her knowledge and confidence. When the great ones of the world came to visit America's most picturesque literary figure, she gave welcome to them and filled her place at his side with such sweet grace that those who came to pay their duties to him often returned to pay still greater devotion to his companion.

William Dean Howells, so often a visitor there, once said to the writer: "Words cannot express Mrs. Clemens—her fineness, her delicate, wonderful tact." And again, "She was not only a beautiful soul, but a woman of singular intellectual power."

There were always visitors in the Clemens home. Above the mantel in the library was written, "The ornament of a house is the friends that frequent it," and the Clemens home never lacked of these ornaments, and they were of the world's best. No distinguished person came to America that did not pay a visit to Hartford and Mark Twain. Generally it was not merely a call, but a stay of days. The welcome was always genuine, the entertainment unstinted.—Albert Bigelow Paine in St. Nicholas.

SHAKESPEARE'S WORKS.

The Precious First Edition Quartos Are Now Next to Priceless.

Few literary prophecies have been so strikingly fulfilled as that of the "newest writer" who in the preface which followed the revised title of the first edition of "Troilus and Cressida" (1609) predicted of Shakespeare that "when he is gone and his commodities out of sale you will scramble for them and set up a new English Inquisition."

The number of first editions in quarto of Shakespeare's plays now known to exist is 144, with two fragments, of which eighty are in public ownership and sixty-four in private ownership. These volumes are worth not merely their weight in gold, but their weight in banknotes of high denominations. They represent sixteen different plays of two of them having double texts, making an average of eight copies of each and those which were most popular having already been pirated—"Romeo and Juliet," the first "Hamlet," "Henry V." and the "Merry Wives"—master only; seventeen copies among them.

YACHT RACE FOR A RICH PRIZE

Clever Device Enables Slow Boat to Beat Swift Rival.

Royal Leighton had been hanging about Blanche Asche for a long while. Miss Asche gave him little encouragement; indeed, she seemed to be at times bored by his persistency. She was full of mischief and occasionally would give him a bit of hope just to see how crestfallen he would be when she gave him the cold shoulder. One day when Leighton had proposed for the tenth time the lady said to him:

"I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll match my yacht Ariadne against your Onaida. If your boat beats mine I'll marry you. If mine beats yours be it understood that you're not to bother me with your proposals ever after."

"But my Onaida is a tub," said Leighton. "I know nothing about yachts. You know a lot about them, and your Ariadne is the fastest boat of her class afloat in American waters."

"It's that or nothing," Blanche replied.

There was nothing for Leighton but to seize upon this one chance. He agreed to the terms, the best two in three races.

On the day of the first race few knew anything about it, and those who did failed to see much pleasure in prospect for a race between the fleet Ariadne and the commonplace Onaida. The crew of the Onaida went aboard before daylight in the morning. Leighton himself going just before the race. He bade adieu to Miss Asche at the dock as cool as if he were indifferent as to the result.

There was a fine breeze to the stake boat, and the Ariadne sailed away from the Onaida, turning the stake half a mile in the lead; but, coming back, there was much surprise on the part of the spectators to see that the Onaida under a slackening wind gained on her rival, but she did not make up more than half her loss, and the first race was won by Miss Asche.

At the second—a triangular race—there was scarcely any wind at all. The spectators speculated as to how the Onaida could get over the water while the Ariadne was almost becalmed, but it was generally supposed that the sailor of the former took advantage of a tide current. The Onaida drew away from her rival on the second leg of the triangle and kept most of what she had gained on the third leg, coming in a full minute ahead.

Miss Asche's heart stood still. Before the third race was sailed the captain of the Ariadne asked permission to make a personal inspection of the Onaida. It was granted, but if the inspector was looking for some propelling machinery he found none. In deed, there was no need of such an inspection, for a representative of each owner sailed on the opposing yacht. The captain went away apparently satisfied, but puzzled.

There were a few persons on the dock early in the day before the third race who saw members of the Onaida's crew go aboard and noticed that when they walked it was with a stiff gait, while one of them had a body on him disproportionate to his limbs. But these witnesses had nothing to do with the yachts or the races.

The third race was to and from a stake boat with the wind on the quarter. The winning of the second race by the Onaida had excited an interest in the last trial, and the course was covered by yachts and pleasure boats. Of course no one knew of the stake or there would have been no room on the water for the contestants. If the second race was a surprise the third was a marvel. The Onaida, without carrying either the sail or having the excellent lines of her rival, had no sooner got away under an eight knot breeze than she began to draw ahead, turning the stake a quarter of a mile in advance. On the way back the breeze lulled, and with the hull the relative speed of the Onaida increased. She crossed the line three-eighths of a mile ahead of the Ariadne amid shouts of the spectators and barking of yachts' cannon.

There was suspicion that, after all, there had been fraud perpetrated in the race, but Miss Asche's representative said that he had been on deck every minute of every race and could have detected it if practiced. Mr. Leighton dined with the loser on the evening of the last race, and after dinner they retired to the library, where he claimed his reward. Miss Asche confessed with her head on his bosom that she had dreaded lest she should not win. Nevertheless she was chagrined that her yacht should have been so ignominiously beaten.

"Don't distress yourself about that sweetheart," said her lover. "Tomorrow I will give you a sail in her and show why you were beaten."

When they were aboard the Onaida Leighton gave the crew orders to line up on deck. From the fat man's stomach he took the parts of a pump, while the rest pulled sections of piping from under their trousers' legs. These were taken to the keelson, a plug taken from a hole in the stem and one from the stern. When the apparatus had been put together water was sucked noiselessly from the forehead hole and ejected from the one at the stern.

"I got the idea," said Leighton, "from a marine animal that propels itself in the same fashion."

Miss Asche was satisfied. She had lost the race, as she had secretly desired, and her boat was still her pride.

Affecting Electric Current.

It has been found that oil in sand or earth causes it to have a very high resistance to the flow of an electrical current, while, on the other hand, certain ores in the earth cause it to have a very low resistivity.

SAXON

Strength Economy Service

HIGH mileage per unit of gasoline reduces the fuel cost of operating Saxon Roadster to the minimum figure. Many owners report an average of 30 miles to the gallon of gas. And the sturdy construction of Saxon "Four" cuts the cost of mechanical attention to the lowest notch. Saxon "Four" will stand up and give unflagging service shoulder to shoulder with cars costing far more. Another feature of Saxon Roadster is its light weight. This reduces tire wear to the lowest limit. From 3500 to 5000 miles on a single set of tires is the average for Saxon "Four" at $395.
